

Entry Review — Family

WHAT YOU WILL RECEIVE · V1.0 · PENDING FOUNDER SIGN-OFF

An Entry Review — Family is a short, single-document, written first-read of your situation. It is deliberately smaller than a Threshold Family review, because its job is to help you decide whether a full review is worth commissioning, not to conclude anything on its own.

The deliverable

1. One structured written document, roughly six to eight pages

Authored by a named ORVIA reviewer. Not a full report.

2. Neutral restatement of your situation

So you can check we have understood it correctly before spending more.

3. Named observations

Two to four observations the evidence you described appears to support.

4. Named gaps

Two to four important things the evidence does NOT show — or that we cannot see from what you have described.

5. A recommendation on next step

Full Threshold review · pause and gather more evidence · redirect to a solicitor · no further ORVIA product needed.

6. What is out of scope

A named list of what an Entry Review deliberately does not do.

How it moves

This service follows the ORVIA enquiry journey — every enquiry passes Gate One (suitability), then Gate Two (controlled onboarding) before any evidence is examined. See the How it works page on orvia.org.uk for the full flow.

Every issued document carries a named ORVIA reviewer, a Founder sign-off, a version number and a date. Findings are footnoted to the source material supplied to us.

Entry Review — Family · What you will receive

What this is not

- Not legal representation or legal advice.
- Not a clinical diagnosis or clinical opinion.
- Not a statutory investigation and not a substitute for one.
- Not a guarantee of any particular outcome for a specific person or organisation.
- Not accreditation from a regulator or professional body.

Fees and scope

Fees, timescales and payment terms for this service are set out on the Fees & Scope page and confirmed in writing in your engagement letter before any substantive work begins. Nothing on this document commits either party to a specific fee. Any published pricing is a working guide subject to Gate One review.

Status

This document is a working specification, pending factual sign-off by the ORVIA Founder. It has been drafted with care but no claim in it should be treated as a promise until the signed-off version is issued.
